Text channels are inferior to voice channels in the sense that you cannot use spaces. Why it has always been this way remains a mystery. However, with the use of special characters, we can space text and emojis apart.

When using emojis in text channels, it is generally advised to space them apart from the text. This way you avoid squashed looking channels where the wording is not spaced from the emoji. You may also wish to space multiple words apart without relying on the default hypens (the lines that appear when you try to put normal spaces).

The special characters provided in this document allow you to do both these things! They all have invisible whitespace around them, giving the illusion of spaces.
